THE INTERPORT CRICKET MATCH. The interpert cricket match between men which does not grudge an opponent Hongkong and Shanghai is now a thing of his victory. the past. Long looked forward to the interest manifested in it was great, and the feeling was enhanced from the fact that Shanghil had sent a strong team. Indeed, the pro sance of several players in the northern team who had been more closely connect with Hongkoug in the past was looked upon as a point in favour of the visitors; and every preparation was made to give them a hard pull for victory. The executive of the Hongkong C.C. placed its full strength in the field. It has no cause to regret the selection of a single man in the team. At all points they compared most favourably with their opponents, and, without overlooking the luck which was experienced yesterday by the homesters, it must, we think, be admitted that the Hongkong Eleven were the superiors of the Shanghai representatives. Hongkong might not have had so many bowlers, but of the lot tried by the Shanghai captain not one was equal to Dr Lowson or E. J. Coxon. These two bowled admirably, and to-day when the ground gave him some smistance Coron bowled with due effect. He got on a lot of break and irequently passed the batemen. The variety of attack on the part of the vinitors was certainly a great advantage. Were it not for this, the total of the Hongkong team would be very much discounted. But the score was compiled by some splendid individual batting. Captain Dunn, stoning for his partial failure to come off in the match last year at Shanghai, batted in magnificent style. His innings was the best of the match as well as the most valuable numerically, and it was a testimony to his popularity to hear nothing but terms of congratulation and pleasure on all sides. He was nobly assisted by his men, each vieing with the other to contribute to the success of the team as a whole. Monis and Ormen on the other side did yeomin service, while those who witnessed the match would have regretted if Barff had been absent from one side or the other. Moule gave us a specimen of two styles of play. Forcing the game on Thursday, he displayed fine hitting powers, whereas to-day he played a stardy defensive game which might have been emplated by some more on his side. In fielding, Hougkong were immeasurably superior to Shanghai. The latter had to field with a greasy ball on wet ground during the greater part of the Hongkoug innings, but even these conditions could not be held up as excuse for some of the glaring blemishes which contributed to the success of their opponents. Bruce-Robertson, who must have been perplexed and bewildered by the frequent changes he made in the bowlers, kept wickets exceed. ingly well, contrasting favourably with G. S. Coxon, who, while he did some clover things, could have done much better. Wickham was the only other man on

Umpires' decisions were accepted without question, and there was not a single regrettable incident to mar the game. INTERPORT ORICKET MATCH. SHANGHAI v. HONGKUNG. DEFEAT OF SHANGHAL

The match between Borgkong and Shanghai was brought to a rather abrupt termination to-day in consequence of the weak defence shown by the visitors, and shortly before one o'clock the game had been decided in Hongkong's favour by an innings and 132 runs. Fortunately no rain fell, but when the match was resumed this forenoon the air was raw and cold, the sky overcest, and the light none of the best. There was a much smaller attendance of spectators. Wallace and Mann, the overnight not-outs, did not stay very long at financing is considerably in demand at the wickets, although the former managed to put together a few runs before being returned to the pavilion. The dinner was served on deck, the saloon being too small for so large a company... Closed awnings and a royal display of bunting made the place fairly comfortable. Some declined extra wraps, deeming the inside lining, just being introduced, suffi. cient. Various tossis were given by Captain ashton, Captain Bathurst and others, which were drauk off in high glee. After an elaborate dinner, music and dancing were the order of the day, promoting warmth and good digestion. A gentleman of the Custome staff in burnt cork and genuine civilized African costume added much to the entertainment of the evening by the singing of his darkey songs, and his good natured jests. Shortly after midnight, the party broke up with many thanks to Captain Ashton and the officers for very enjoyable evening.

Cipt. Ashton, who was suffering at the time from a bad cold, and not improving as all could have wished, has remained with Dr. Underwood for a season. He has the best wishes of his many friends for speedy return to his usual health and strength. > A GHOST AMONG THE SPIRITS. Do I believe in Spiritualism! Well, perhaps I do and perhaps I don't-anyway

Oh l no ! please don't - it's such an old. old joke, that. A man like you ought to know better than that. You want to know what I mean about Spiritualism? Just this. So fer as the thing works. I do believe in it; only it dossn't always. You don't understand yet? Well now, look here, I'll tell you the whole thing (not that there's much of it), and then you just go and fix it up nicely and you'll make a fine story of it. You know how. You journalists are always good lists. No it's no good your protesting. You know you are, Well. Tibbs was his name, Christopher Tibbs (and mind you, if you do mention the name. for pity's cake spell it right. There was nothing used to rouse poor old Tibbs more than to be called Tibb. People did sometimes, and he used to be emphatic about it-very). Well, Tibbs and I and a man called Smith (he has a good many outtains about, and everything was quite still (you can put in the creeps and the horror yourself). After a bit we heard taps, and then the Professor began to talk to somebody. Are you tap, tap, Christopher Tibbs ! Tap. TAP (That's a lie ! I whispered to Tibbs. He was next me and must have heard, only he didn't say anything The next thing was, we heard the Professor shuffle behind a contain. Then some more taps. Then the Professor said. Here he is I Just let's see if he's all right. Tall man ?' I said. 'Yes : fairly tall. Ways. fair hair! Yes. Brown syes and fluty whiskers? Yes. All right; theta liero's Mr Christopher Tibbs. And he flong oper the curtain and out atepped Tibbs or hi ghost. It couldn't have been Tibbs, for touched him with my foot, and there he was still baside me. But there the thing was-Tibbs to the life, only wavy and floating. We could see the curtain through him. It was too much for Smith and he gave a rell and fell over. The ghost flopped behind the curtain, and I struck a match and made for the gas. The Professor pulled the cuttains wide open, but not a trace was to be seen. Smith was in a dead faint on the three other men joined in picking up liquit and restoring him, but Tibbs just sat. By and by Smith came to, and still Tibbe didn't Professor the whole thing. He set to work body was warm and we could move his limbs and he breathed or seemed to " but that was all. After about three hours the Professor gave it up as a bad job; You'd better take him home and put him to bed. Well, that's what we did, but we couldn't do any more. For some days poor old Tibbe was in the same state, till at last we took him to a hospital and told some yata or other and left bies. I changed in lodgings and left no address. That was the last I saw of Tibba's body.

But now here's the curious part of the story. It was on Oct. 26th that we played that wick on the Professor, and on the 26th of every month, as sure as clock work, that ghost comes hanging round me about 10 o'clock. And the language it uses is something awful. I tell him it was his own fault, but he won't see it. Once I threw my boot at him and it went through him. Then he tried to throw it back, but he couldn't. You see it was solid and his fingers weren't. Well, that sort of thise has gone on for years now, and wherever go that ghost haunts me on the 26th of the month. How do I explain it? I can't All l know is, old Tibbs seemed alive-moved his arms and so on, but his eyes stared and there seemed to be no life in him. That's a contradiction, is it ? Well, you go to that hospital-you'll find him there or elec they'll tell you where he is and you'll see

How do I know ? Because last time he came, he asked how long I was going to defraudhim of his body (as if I had had anything to do with it), and said I might pily # poor fellow who had kept on hanging round outside his own body so long and couldn't get in, try as he might That's ail. Now you just think it over.

You journalist fellows lay out to know a thing or two. You see if you can explain Oh! thank you, I think I will. The Blue Pig 'is rather a good place.

fully maintains the high standard of excellence which characterises that publistion, and altogether forms a very interesting and readable number. " Notes on the Dutch Occupation of Formosa," by Mr. Geo. Phillips, contains some interesting information, although much of it is second-hand. The Notion of Now Books include a most generous and appreciative review of "The Divine Classic of Nan-Hua," and the Notes and Queries are as usual very interesting.' -- North-China
